

RSC Applied Interfaces

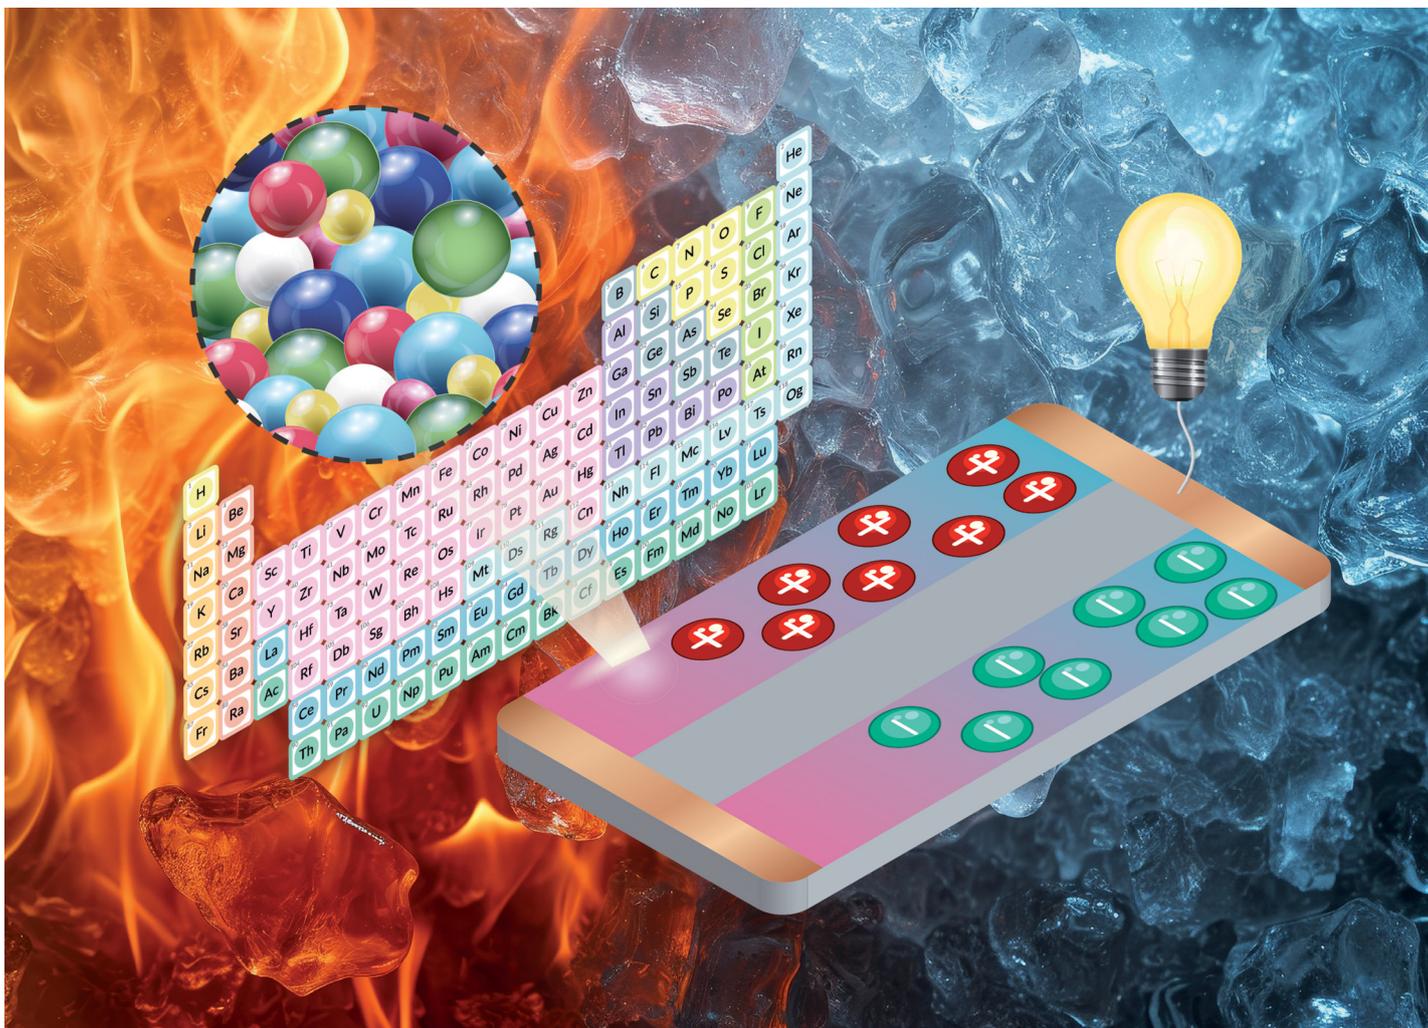

GOLD
OPEN ACCESS

Interfacial and surface research with an applied focus

Interdisciplinary and open access

rsc.li/RSCApplInter

Fundamental questions
Elemental answers

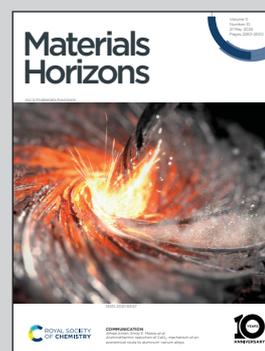

Highlighting a review by the group of Dr Nouredine Ouedna at Mohammed VI Polytechnic University, Morocco

High-entropy materials for thermoelectric applications: towards performance and reliability

The new concept of high-entropy materials has unlocked the door to a wide range of applications such as thermoelectrics. Through the mixing of different elements, which leads to lattice distortion, the heat-carrying phonons are scattered, leading to reduced lattice thermal conductivity. This breakthrough review summarizes recent progress in the design of high-entropy thermoelectric materials.

As featured in:

See Nouredine Ouedna, Hicham Ben Youcef et al., Mater. Horiz., 2024, 11, 2323.